The Station Street office building is nestled between the Fremantle train line and the busy retail hub of Cottesloe. Inspired by the black timber cabins on the ski slopes of New Zealand, the dark black timber weatherboard façade perforated with the strong contrasting ultra white deep window reveals and shading awnings, provide a new texture and aesthetic to the existing Cottesloe vernacular.

The corner of the development provides activation at street level with some retail integration. Upper level tenancies are provided with a matrix of vistas responding to the building orientation and the upper level tenant is provided with a perimeter terraced edge offering the exploration of higher level views under the floating ‘cloud’ roof.
